Report of Lieut. General U. S. Grant, of the Armies of the United States—1864-'65.

Having received considerable reinforcements, General Early again returned to the valley, and on the 9th of October his cavalry encountered ours near Strasburg, where the rebels were defeated, with the loss of eleven pieces of artillery and 350 prisoners. On the night of the 18th the enemy crossed the mountains which separate the branches of the Shenandoah, forded the north fork, and early on the morning of the 19th, under cover of the darkness and fog, surprised and turned our left flank, capturing the batteries which enfiladed our whole line. Our troops fell back with heavy loss and in much confusion, but were finally rallied between Middletown and Newtown. At this juncture General Sheridan, who was at Winchester when the battle commenced, arrived on the field, arranged his lines just in time to repulse a heavy attack of the enemy, and immediately assuming the offensive, he attacked in turn with great vigor. The enemy was defeated with great slaughter and the loss of most of his artillery and trains and the trophies he had captured in the morning. The wreck of his army escaped during the night, and fled in the direction of Staunton and Lynchburg. Pursuit was made to Mount Jackson. Thus ended this, the enemy's last attempt to invade the north, via the Shenandoah valley. I was now enabled to return the 6th corps to the army of the Potomac, and to send one division from Sheridan's army to the army of the James, and another to Savannah, Georgia, to hold Sherman's new acquisitions on the sea coast, and thus enable him to move without detaching from his force for that purpose.

Reports from various sources led me to believe that the enemy had detached three divisions from Petersburg to reinforce Early in the Shenandoah Valley. I therefore sent the Second Corps and Gregg's division of cavalry of the Army of the Potomac, and a force of General Butler's army, on the night of the 13th of August, to threaten Richmond from the north side of the James, to prevent him from sending troops away, and, if possible, to draw back those sent. In this movement we captured six pieces of artillery and several hundred prisoners, detained the troops that were under marching orders, and ascertained that but one division (Kershaw's) of the three reputed detached had gone.

The enemy having withdrawn heavily from Petersburg to resist this movement, the Fifth Corps, General Warren commanding, was moved out on the 18th and took possession of the Weldon road. During the day he had considerable fighting. To regain possession of the road, the enemy made repeated and desperate assaults, but was each time repulsed with great loss. On the night of the 20th the troops on the north side of the James were withdrawn, and Hancock and Gregg returned to the front of Petersburg. On the 25th the Second Corps and Gregg's division of cavalry, while at Ream's Station destroying the railroad, were attacked, and after desperate fighting, a part of our line gave way, and five pieces of artillery fell into the hands of the enemy.

By the 12th of September a branch railroad was completed from the City Point and Petersburg Railroad to the Weldon Railroad, enabling us to supply, without difficulty, in all weather, the army in front of Petersburg.

The extension of our lines across the Weldon Railroad compelled the enemy to so extend his that it seemed he could have but few troops north of the James for the defense of Richmond. On the night of the 28th the Tenth Corps, Major General Birney, and the 18th Corps, Major-General Ord commanding, of General Butler's army, were crossed to the north side of the James, and advanced the morning of the 29th, carrying the very strong fortifications and intrenchments below Chapin's farm, known as Fort Harrison, capturing fifteen pieces of artillery and the New Market road and intrenchments. The success was followed up by a gallant assault upon Fort Gilmore, immediately in front of the Chapin farm fortifications, in which we were repulsed with heavy loss. Kautz's cavalry was pushed forward on the road to the right of this, supported by infantry, and reached the enemy's inner line, but was unable to get further.

The position captured from the enemy was so threatening to Richmond that I determined to hold it. The enemy made several desperate attempts to dislodge us, all of which were unsuccessful, and for which he paid dearly. On the morning of the 30th General Meade sent out a reconnoissance, with a view to attacking the enemy's line if it was found sufficiently weakened by withdrawal of troops to the north side. In this reconnoissance we captured and held the enemy's works near Poplar Spring Church. In the afternoon troops moving to get to the left of the point gained were attacked by the enemy in heavy force, and compelled to fall back until supported by the forces holding the captured works. Our cavalry, under Gregg, was also attacked, but repulsed the enemy with great loss.

On the 7th of October the enemy attacked Kautz's cavalry north of the James, and drove it back with heavy loss in killed, wounded and prisoners, and the loss of all the artillery—eight or nine pieces. This he followed up by an attack on our intrenched infantry line, but was repulsed with severe slaughter. On the 13th a reconnoissance was sent out by General Butler, with a view to drive the enemy from some new works he was constructing, which resulted in very heavy loss to us.

On the 27th the Army of the Potomac, leaving only sufficient men to hold its fortified line, moved by the enemy's right flank. The Second Corps, followed by two divisions of the Fifth Corps, with the cavalry in advance and covering our left flank, forced a passage of Hatcher's Run, and moved up the south side of it towards the Southside Railroad, until the Second Corps and part of the cavalry reached the Boydton plank road where it crosses Hatcher's Run. At this point we were six miles distant from the Southside Railroad, which I had hoped by this movement to reach and hold. But finding that we had not reached the end of the enemy's fortifications, and no place presenting itself for a successful assault by which he might be doubled up and shortened, I determined to withdraw to within our fortified line. Orders were given accordingly. Immediately on receiving a report that General Warren had connected with General Hancock, I returned to my headquarters. Soon after I left, the enemy moved out across Hatcher's Run, in the gap between Gens. Hancock and Warren, which was not closed as reported, and made a desperate attack on General Hancock's right and rear. General Hancock immediately faced his corps to meet it, and after a bloody combat drove the enemy within his works, and withdrew that night to his old position.

In support of this movement General Butler made a demonstration on the north side of the James and attacked the enemy on the Williamsburg road, and also on the York river railroad. In the former he was unsuccessful; in the latter he succeeded in carrying a work which was afterwards abandoned, and his forces withdrawn to their former positions.

From this time forward, the operations in front of Petersburgh and Richmond, until the Spring campaign of 1865, were confined to the defense and extension of our lines, and to offensive movements for crippling the enemy's lines of communication, and to prevent his detaching any considerable force to send south. By the 7th of February our lines were extended to Hatcher's Run, and the Weldon railroad had been destroyed to Hicksford.

General Sherman moved from Chattanooga on the 6th of May, with the armies of the Cumberland, Tennessee and Ohio, commanded respectively by Generals Thomas, McPherson and Schofield, upon Johnston's army at Dalton, but finding the enemy's positions at Buzzard Roost, covering Dalton, too strong to be assaulted, General McPherson was sent through Snake Gap to turn it, whilst Generals Thomas and Schofield threatened it in front and on the north. This movement was successful. Johnston, finding his retreat likely to be cut off, fell back to his fortified position at Resaca, where he was attacked on the afternoon of May 15th. A heavy battle ensued. During the night the enemy retreated south. Late on the 15th, his rear guard was overtaken near Adairsville, and heavy skirmishing followed. The next morning, however, he had again disappeared. He was vigorously pursued and was overtaken at Cassville, on the 19th, but during the ensuing night retreated across the Etowah. While these operations were going on, General Jefferson C. Davis' division of Thomas' army, was sent to Rome, capturing it with its forts and artillery, and its valuable mills and foundries. General Sherman having given his army a few days' rest at this point, again put it in motion on the 23d for Dallas, with a view of turning the difficult pass at Allatoona. On the afternoon of the 25th the advance, under General Hooker, had a severe battle with the enemy, driving him back to New Hope Church, near Dallas. Several sharp encounters occurred at this point. The most important was on the 28th, when the enemy assaulted General McPherson at Dallas, but received a terrible and bloody repulse.

On the 4th of June Johnston abandoned his intrenched position at New Hope Church and retreated to the strong positions of Kenesaw, Pine and Lost Mountains. He was forced to yield the two last named places and concentrate his army on Kenesaw, where, on the 27th, Generals Thomas and McPherson made a determined but unsuccessful assault. On the night of the 2d of July Sherman commenced moving his army by the right flank, and on the morning of the 3d found that the enemy, in consequence of this movement, had abandoned Kenesaw and retreated across the Chattahoochie.

General Sherman remained on the Chattahoochie to give his men rest and get up stores until the 17th of July, when he resumed his operations, crossed the Chattahoochie, destroyed a large portion of the railroad to Augusta, and drove the enemy back to Atlanta. At this place General Hood succeeded General Johnston in command of the rebel army, and assuming the offensive-defensive policy, made several severe attacks upon Sherman in the vicinity of Atlanta, the most desperate and determined of which was on the 22d of July. About one P. M. of this day the brave, accomplished and noble hearted McPherson was killed. General Logan succeeded him and commanded the Army of the Tennessee through this desperate battle and until he was superseded by Major General Howard on the 26th, with the same success and ability that had characterized him in the command of a corps or division.

In all these attacks the enemy was repulsed with great loss. Finding it impossible to entirely invest the place, General Sherman, after securing his line of communication across the Chattahoochie, moved his main force round by the enemy's left flank upon the Montgomery and Macon roads, to draw the enemy from his fortifications. In this, he succeeded, and, after defeating the enemy near Rough and Ready, Jonesboro and Lovejoy's, forcing him to retreat to the south, on the 2d of September occupied Atlanta, the objective point of his campaign.

About the time of this move the rebel cavalry, under Wheeler, attempted to cut his communications in the rear, but was repulsed at Dalton and driven into East Tennessee, whence it proceeded west to McMinnville, Murfreesboro and Franklin, and was finally driven south of the Tennessee. The damage done by this raid was repaired in a few days.

During the partial investment of Atlanta, Gen. Rousseau joined General Sherman with a force of cavalry from Decatur, having made a successful raid upon the Atlanta and Montgomery Railroad and its branches near Opelika. Cavalry raids were also made by Generals McCook, Garrard and Stoneman to cut the remaining railroad communication with Atlanta. The first two were successful, the latter disastrous.

General Sherman's movement from Chattanooga to Atlanta was prompt, skillful and brilliant. The history of his flank movements and battles during that memorable campaign will ever be read with an interest unsurpassed by anything in history.

His own report, and those of his subordinate commanders accompanying it, give the details of that most successful campaign.

He was dependent for the supply of his armies upon a single track railroad from Nashville to the point where he was operating. This passed the entire distance through a hostile country and every foot of it had to be protected by troops. The cavalry force of the enemy, under Forrest, in Northern Mississippi, was evidently waiting for Sherman to advance far enough into the mountains of Georgia to make a retreat disastrous, to get upon his line and destroy it beyond the possibility of further use. To guard against this danger, Sherman left what he supposed to be a sufficient force to operate against Forrest in West Tennessee. He directed General Washburn, who commanded there, to send Brigadier General S. D. Sturgis, in command of this force to attack him. On the morning of the 10th of June, General Sturgis met the enemy near Guntown, Mississippi, was badly beaten, and driven back in utter rout and confusion to Memphis, a distance of about one hundred miles, hotly pursued by the enemy. By this, however, the enemy was defeated in his designs upon Sherman's lines of communication. The persistency with which he followed up this success exhausted him, and made a season for rest and repairs necessary. In the meantime Major-General A. J. Smith, with the troops of the Army of the Tennessee that had been sent by General Sherman to General Banks, arrived at Memphis on their return from Red river, where they had done most excellent service. He was directed by General Sherman to immediately take the offensive against Forrest. This he did with the promptness and effect which has characterized his whole military career. On the 14th of July he met the enemy at Tupelo, Mississippi, and whipped him badly. The fighting continued through three days. Our loss was small compared with the enemy. Having accomplished the object of his expedition, General Smith returned to Memphis.

During the months of March and April this same force under Forrest annoyed us considerably. On the 24th of March it captured Union City, Kentucky, and its garrison, and on the 24th attacked Paducah, commanded by Colonel S. G. Hicks, Fortieth Illinois Volunteers. Colonel Hicks having but a small force withdrew to the forts near the river, from where he repulsed the enemy and drove him from the place.

On the 13th of April part of this force, under the rebel General Buford, summoned the garrison of Columbus, Kentucky, to surrender, but received for reply from Colonel Lawrence, Thirty Fourth New Jersey Volunteers, that, being placed there by his Government with adequate force to hold his post and repel all enemies from it, surrender was out of the question.

On the morning of the same day, Forrest attacked Fort Pillow, (Tennessee), garrisoned by a detachment of Tennessee cavalry, and the First Regiment of Alabama colored troops, commanded by Major Booth. The garrison fought bravely until about three o'clock in the afternoon, when the enemy carried the works by assault, and after our men threw down their arms, proceeded to an inhuman and merciless massacre of the garrison.

On the 14th, General Buford having failed at Columbus, appeared before Paducah, but was again driven off.

Guerrillas and raiders, seemingly emboldened by Forrest's operations, were also active in Kentucky. The most noted of these was Morgan. With a force of from two to three thousand cavalry he entered the State through Pound Gap in the latter part of May. On the 11th of June he attacked and captured Cynthiana, with its entire garrison. On the 12th he was overtaken by General Burbridge and completely routed, with heavy loss, and was finally driven out of the State. This notorious guerrilla was afterwards surprised and killed near Greenville, Tennessee, and his command captured and dispersed by General Gillem.

In the absence of official reports of the commencement of the Red river expedition, except so far as relates to the movements of troops sent by Generals Sherman and A. J. Smith, I am unable to give the date of its starting. The troops under General Smith, comprising two divisions of the Sixteenth and a detachment of the Seventeenth army corps, left Vicksburg on the 10th of March, and reached the designated point on Red river one day earlier than that appointed by General Banks. The rebel forces at Fort De Russey, thinking to defeat him, left the fort on the 14th to give him battle in the open field, but while occupying the enemy with skirmishing and demonstrations, Smith pushed forward to Fort De Russey, which had been left with a weak garrison, and captured it, with its garrison—about 350 men, eleven pieces of artillery, and many small arms. Our loss was slight. On the 15th he pushed forward to Alexandria, which place he reached on the 18th. On the 21st he had an engagement with the enemy at Henderson Hill, in which he defeated him, capturing 210 prisoners and four pieces of artillery.

On the 28th he again attacked and defeated the enemy under the rebel General Taylor at Cane river. By the 26th General Banks had assembled his whole army at Alexandria and pushed forward to Grand Ecore. On the morning of April 6th he moved from Grand Ecore. On the afternoon of the 7th his advance engaged the enemy near Pleasant Hill and drove him from the field. On the same afternoon the enemy made a stand eight miles beyond Pleasant Hill, but was again compelled to retreat. On the 8th, at Sabine Cross roads and Peach Hill the enemy attacked and defeated his advance, capturing nineteen pieces of artillery and an immense amount of transportation and stores. During the night General Banks fell back to Pleasant Hill, where another battle was fought on the 9th, and the enemy repulsed with great loss. During the night General Banks continued his retrograde movement to Grand Ecore and thence to Alexandria, which he reached on the 27th of April. Here a serious difficulty arose in getting Admiral Porter's fleet, which accompanied the expedition, over the rapids, the water having fallen so much since they passed up as to prevent their return. At the suggestion of Colonel (now Brigadier General) Bailey, and under his superintendence, wingdams were constructed by which the channel was contracted so that the fleet passed down the rapids in safety.

The army evacuated Alexandria on the 14th of May, after considerable skirmishing with the enemy's advance, and reached Morganzia and Point Coupee near the end of the month. The disastrous termination of this expedition, and the lateness of the season, rendered impracticable the carrying out of my plan of a movement in force sufficient to insure the capture of Mobile.

On the 23d of March Major General Steele left Little Rock with the Seventh Army Corps to co-operate with General Banks' expedition on Red River, and reached Arkadelphia on the 28th. On the 16th of April, after driving the enemy before him he was joined near Elkin's Ferry, in Washita county, by General Thayer, who had marched from Fort Smith. After several severe skirmishes, in which the enemy was defeated, General Steele reached Camden, which he occupied about the middle of April.

On learning the defeat and consequent retreat of General Banks on Red River, and the loss of one of his own trains at Marks' Mill, in Dallas county, General Steele determined to fall back on the Arkansas river. He left Camden on the 26th of April and reached Little Rock on the 2d of May. On the 30th of April the enemy attacked him while crossing Saline river at Jenkins' Ferry, but was repulsed with considerable loss. Our loss was about six hundred in killed, wounded and prisoners.

Major General Canby, who had been assigned to the command of the "military division of west Mississippi," was therefore directed to send the Nineteenth Army Corps to join the armies operating against Richmond, and to limit the remainder of his command to such operations and lines of communications as he then occupied.

Before starting General A. J. Smith's troops back to Sherman, General Canby sent a part of it to disperse a force of the enemy that was collecting near the Mississippi river. General Smith met and defeated this force near Lake Chicot on the 5th of June. Our loss was about 40 killed and 70 wounded.

In the latter part of July General Canby sent Major General Gordon Granger, with such forces as he could collect, to co-operate with Admiral Farragut against the defenses of Mobile bay. On the 8th of August Fort Gaines surrendered to the combined naval and land forces. Fort Powell was blown up and abandoned.

On the 9th Fort Morgan was invested, and, after a severe bombardment, surrendered on the 23d. The total captures amounted to 1,464 prisoners, and 104 pieces of artillery.

About the last of August, it being reported that the rebel General Price with a force of about 10,000 men, had reached Jacksonport, on his way to invade Missouri, General A. J. Smith's command, then en route from Memphis to join Sherman, was ordered to Missouri. A cavalry force was also, at the same time, sent from Memphis, under command of Colonel Winslow. This made General Rosecran's forces superior to those of Price, and no doubt was entertained that he would be able to check Price and drive him back, while the forces under General Steele, in Arkansas, would cut off his retreat. On the 26th day of September Price attacked Pilot Knob, and forced the garrison to retreat, and thence moved north to the Missouri river, and continued up that river toward Kansas. General Curtis, commanding the Department of Kansas, immediately collected such forces as he could to repel the invasion of Kansas, while General Rosecrans' cavalry was operating in his rear.

The enemy was brought to battle on the Big Blue, and defeated, with the loss of nearly all his artillery and trains and a large number of prisoners. He made a precipitate retreat to Northern Arkansas. The impunity with which Price was enabled to roam over the State of Missouri for a long time, and the incalculable mischief done by him, shows to how little purpose a superior force may be used. There is no reason why General Rosecrans should not have concentrated his forces, and beaten and driven Price before the latter reached Pilot Knob.

September 20th the enemy's cavalry, under Forrest, crossed the Tennessee near Waterloo, Alabama, and on the 23d attacked the garrison at Athens, consisting of six hundred men, which capitulated on the 24th. Soon after the surrender two regiments of reinforcements arrived, and after a severe fight were compelled to surrender. Forrest destroyed the railroad westward, captured the garrison at Sulphur Branch trestle, skirmished with the garrison at Pulaski on the 27th, and on the same day cut the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad near Tullahoma and Dechard. On the morning of the 30th, one column of Forrest's command, under Buford, appeared before Huntsville, and summoned the surrender of the garrison. Receiving an answer in the negative, he remained in the vicinity of the place until the next morning, when he again summoned its surrender, and received the same reply as on the night before. He withdrew in the direction of Athens, which place had been garrisoned, and attacked it on the afternoon of the 1st of October, but without success. On the morning of the 2d he renewed his attack, but was handsomely repulsed.

Another column under Forrest appeared before Columbia on the morning of the 1st, but did not make an attack. On the morning of the 3d he moved toward Mount Pleasant. While these operations were going on every exertion was made by General Thomas to destroy the forces under Forrest before he could recross the Tennessee, but was unable to prevent his escape to Corinth, Mississippi.

In September an expedition under General Burbridge was sent to destroy the salt works at Saltville, Va. He met the enemy on the 2d of October, about three miles and a half from Saltville, and drove him into his strongly intrenched position around the salt works, from which he was unable to dislodge him. During the night he withdrew his command and returned to Kentucky.

General Sherman, immediately after the fall of Atlanta, put his armies in camp in and about the place and made all preparations for refitting and supplying them for future service. The great length of road from Atlanta to the Cumberland river, however, which had to be guarded, allowed the troops but little rest.

During this time Jefferson Davis made a speech in Macon, (Ga.,) which was reported in the papers of the South, and soon became known to the whole country, disclosing the plans of the enemy, thus enabling General Sherman to fully meet them. He exhibited the weakness of supposing that an army that had been beaten and fearfully decimated in a vain attempt at the defensive could successfully undertake the offensive against the army that had so often defeated it.

In execution of this plan, Hood, with his army, was soon reported to the southwest of Atlanta. Moving far to Sherman's right, he succeeded in reaching the railroad about Big Shanty, and moved north on it.

General Sherman leaving a force to hold Atlanta, with the remainder of his army fell upon him and drove him to Gadsden, Alabama. Seeing the constant annoyance he would have with the roads in his rear if we attempted to hold Atlanta, General Sherman proposed the abandonment and destruction of that place, with all the railroads leading to it, and telegraphed me as follows:

CENTREVILLE, GA., Oct. 10—Noon.

Dispatch about Wilson received. Hood is now crossing Coosa river, twelve miles below Rome, bound west. If he passes over the Mobile and Ohio road, had I not better execute the plan of my letter sent by Col. Porter, and leave General Thomas with the troops now in Tennessee, to defend the State? He will have an ample force when the reinforcements ordered reach Nashville.

W. T. SHERMAN, Major General.
Lieutenant General Grant.

For a full understanding of the plan referred to in this dispatch, I quote from the letter sent by Colonel Porter: "I will therefore give my opinion that your army and Canby's should be reinforced to the maximum; that after you get Wilmington you strike for Savannah and the river; that Canby be instructed to hold the Mississippi river, and send a force to get Columbus, (Ga.) either by the way of Alabama or the Apalachicola, and that I keep Hood employed and put my army in final order for a march on Augusta, Columbia and Charleston, to be ready as soon as Wilmington is sealed as to commerce and the city of Savannah is in our possession." This was in reply to a letter of mine of date September 12th, in answer to a dispatch of his containing substantially the same proposition, and in which I informed him of a proposed movement against Wilmington, and of the situation in Virginia, etc.

CITY POINT, VA., October 11, 1864—4 A. M.

Your despatch of October 10 received. Does it not look as if Hood was going to attempt the invasion of Middle Tennessee, using the Mobile and Ohio and Memphis and Charleston roads to supply his base on the Tennessee river about Florence or Decatur? If he does this he ought to be met and prevented from getting north of the Tennessee river. If you were to cut loose, I do not believe you would meet Hood's army, but would be bushwhacked by all the old men, little boys, and such railroad guards as are still left at home. Hood would probably strike for Nashville, thinking that by going north he could inflict greater damage on us than we could upon the rebels by going south. If there is any way of getting at Hood's army I would prefer that, but I must trust to your own judgment. I find I shall not be able to send a force from here to act with you on Savannah. Your movements, therefore, will be independent of mine; at least until the fall of Richmond takes place. I am afraid Thomas, with such lines of road as he has to protect, could not prevent Hood from going north. With Wilson turned loose, with all your cavalry, you will find the rebels put much more on the defensive than heretofore.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant-General.
Major-General W. T. Sherman.

KINGSTON, GA., October 11—11 A. M.

Hood moved his army from Palmetto Station across by Dallas and Cedartown, and is now on the Coosa river, south of Rome. He threw one corps on my road at Acworth, and I was forced to follow. I hold Atlanta with the 20th corps, and have strong detachments along my line. This reduces my active force to a very small army. We cannot remain here on the defensive. With the 25,000 men, and the bold cavalry he has, he can constantly break my roads. I would infinitely prefer to make a wreck of the road, and of the country from Chattanooga to Atlanta, including the latter city; send back all my wounded and worthless, and, with my effective army, move through Georgia, smashing things, to the sea. Hood may turn into Tennessee and Kentucky, but I believe he will be forced to follow me. Instead of my being on the defensive, I would be on the offensive; instead of guessing at what he means to do, he would have to guess at my plans. The difference in war is full twenty-five per cent. I can make Savannah, Charleston, or the mouth of the Chattahoochie.

Answer quick, as I know we will not have the telegraph long.

W. T. SHERMAN, Major General.
Lieutenant General Grant.

CITY POINT, VA., Oct. 11, 1864—11:30 P. M.

Your despatch of to-day received. If you are satisfied the trip to the sea coast can be made, holding the line of the Tennessee river firmly, you may make it, destroying all the railroad south of Dalton or Chattanooga, as you think best.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.
Major General W. T. Sherman.

It was the original design to hold Atlanta, and by getting through to the coast, with a garrison left on the Southern railroads leading east and west through Georgia, to effectually sever the east from the west. In other words, cut the would-be Confederacy in two again, as it had been cut once by our gaining possession of the Mississippi river. General Sherman's plan virtually effected this object.

General Sherman commenced at once his preparations for his proposed movement, keeping his army in position in the meantime to watch Hood. Becoming satisfied that Hood had moved westward from Gadsden across Sand Mountain, General Sherman sent the Fourth Corps, Major-General Stanley commanding, and the 23d Corps, Major General Schofield commanding, back to Chattanooga, to report to Major General Thomas, at Nashville, whom he had placed in command of all the troops of his military division, save the four army corps and cavalry division he designed to move with through Georgia. With the troops thus left at his disposal, there was little doubt that General Thomas could hold the line of the Tennessee, or in the event Hood should force it, would be able to concentrate and beat him in battle. It was therefore readily consented to that Sherman should start for the sea-coast.

Having concentrated his troops at Atlanta by the 14th of November, he commenced his march, threatening both Augusta and Macon. His coming-out point could not be definitely fixed. Having to gather his subsistence as he marched through the country, it was not impossible that a force inferior to his own might compel him to head for such a point as he could reach, instead of such as he might prefer. The blindness of the enemy, however, in ignoring his movement, and sending Hood's army, the only considerable force he had west of Richmond and east of the Mississippi river, northward on an offensive campaign, left the whole country open, and Sherman's route to his own choice.

How that campaign was conducted, how little opposition was met with, the condition of the country through which the army passed, the capture of Fort McAllister, on the Savannah river, and the occupation of Savannah on the 21st of December, are all clearly set forth in General Sherman's admirable report.

Soon after General Sherman commenced his march from Atlanta two expeditions—one from Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and one from Vicksburg, Mississippi—were started by General Canby to cut the enemy's line of communication with Mobile and detain troops in that field. General Foster, commanding Department of the South, also sent an expedition, via Broad river, to destroy the railroad between Charleston and Savannah. The expedition from Vicksburg, under command of Brevet Brigadier General E. D. Osband (Colonel Third United States Colored Cavalry,) captured on the 27th of December and destroyed the Mississippi Central Railroad bridge and trestle work over Big Black river, near Canton, thirty miles of the road and two locomotives, besides large amounts of stores. The expedition from Baton Rouge was without favorable results. The expedition from the Department of the South, under the immediate command of Brigadier General J. P. Hatch, consisting of about five thousand men of all arms, including a brigade from the navy, proceeded up Broad river and debarked at Boyd's Neck on the 29th of November, from where it moved to strike the railroad at Grahamsville. At Honey Hill, about three miles from Grahamsville, the enemy was found, and attacked in a strongly fortified position, which resulted, after severe fighting, in our repulse, with a loss of 746 in killed, wounded and missing. During the night General Hatch withdrew. On the 6th of December General Foster obtained a position covering the Charleston and Savannah Railroad, between the Coosawhatchie and Tulifinny rivers.

Hood, instead of following Sherman, continued his move northward, which seemed to me to be leading to his certain doom. At all events, had I had the power to command both armies, I should not have changed the orders under which he seemed to be acting. On the 26th of October the advance of Hood's army attacked the garrison at Decatur (Alabama), but failing to carry the place, withdrew towards Courtland, and succeeded, in the face of our cavalry, in effecting a lodgment on the north side of the Tennessee river, near Florence. On the 28th Forrest reached the Tennessee, at Fort Hieman and captured a gunboat and three transports. On the 2d of November he planted batteries above and below Johnsonville, on the opposite side of the river, isolating three gunboats and eight transports. On the 4th the enemy opened his batteries upon the place, and was replied to from the gunboats and the garrison. The gunboats becoming disabled, were set on fire, as also were the transports, to prevent their falling into the hands of the enemy. About a million and a half dollars' worth of stores and property on the levee and in storehouses was consumed by fire. On the 5th the enemy disappeared and crossed to the north side of the Tennessee river, above Johnsonville, moving towards Clifton, and subsequently joined Hood. On the night of the 5th, General Schofield, with the advance of the Twenty third corps, reached Johnsonville, but finding the enemy gone, was ordered to Pulaski and put in command of all the troops there, with instructions to watch the movements of Hood and retard his advance, but not to risk a general engagement until the arrival of General A. J. Smith's command from Missouri, and until Gen. Smith could get his cavalry remounted.

The President's Message on our Relations with Great Britain

The unsatisfactory state in which our controversy with Great Britain now rests causes every one to inquire what the probable course of our Government will be in connection with this somewhat grave matter. The best method for divining the purposes of the Administration in relation to it, is to consult the annual message of the President. In that document the points in dispute between this country and Great Britain, are clearly stated, and the grounds on which our claims for indemnity rest, set forth with precision. Minister Adams, in his correspondence with Earl Russell, had already declared that our Government did not seek merely to have its citizens indemnified in money for the losses they had suffered at the hands of English rebel cruisers, but that the paramount object was to prevent the principle on which England acted from being incorporated in the code of international law. This point, together with the position occupied by our Government in relation to the whole question, is restated in the following paragraph of the President's message:

The United States did not present the subject as an impeachment of the good faith of a Power which was professing a most friendly disposition but as involving questions of public law of which the settlement is essential to the peace of nations and though pecuniary reparation to their injured citizens would have followed incidentally on a decision against Great Britain, such compensation was not the primary object. They had a higher motive, and it was in the interest of peace and justice, to establish important principles of international law. The ground on which the British Minister rests his justification is, substantially that the municipal law of a nation, and domestic interpretations of that law, are the measure of its duty as a neutral, and I feel bound to declare my opinion, before you, and before the world that this justification cannot be sustained before the tribunal of nations. At the same time, I do not advise to any present attempt at redress by acts of legislation. For the future the friendship between the two countries must rest on the basis of mutual justice.

The primary object of our Government, then, has not been to recover damages for the losses which Great Britain has been instrumental in inflicting upon this country, but to establish important principles of international law. The dangers with which the adoption of the policy that Great Britain insists on, would be fraught, have been laid before the world by our able Minister at the Court of St James. Against this new interpretation by Great Britain of the rights, privileges and duties of neutrals, the United States strongly protests. England is not willing to have the cause of the dispute arbitrated by the tribunal of nations, insisting that the counsellors of the crown are the only judges of the law for the subjects of Great Britain, and the only rightful interpreters of the duties of that Power toward belligerents. Great Britain assumes that she may determine for herself how far she will observe neutrality. In his message the President denies that she—or any other Power—can have this right, and gives it as his opinion that the claim cannot be sustained before the tribunal of nations.

The amount involved in this dispute is probably between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000. From the language of the message we infer that the President would not advise a resort to arms merely for this sum. He says we should not attempt redress at present by acts of legislation. The inference from this is that the matter will be permitted to rest where it now lies until some future occasion shall arise for the enforcement of the rights which this nation claims. We deem it scarcely possible that our Minister will be recalled from the English court. The resolution to that effect which was introduced in the Senate by Mr Chandler will hardly meet the approbation of a majority of Congress. Our Government, from the first, has not proceeded as if war were intended in case of a refusal on the part of Great Britain to come to terms of accommodation. The discovery of this probable intention has perhaps induced the British Government to decline to make the reparation demanded.

The claims of our citizens for losses inflicted by rebel cruisers, do not amount in the aggregate to a very great sum; but the principle involved is one which intimately concerns all the nations of the world. If, however, England shall obstinately refuse to recede from the position she has taken, we can as easily as she, accommodate ourselves to the new state of things. If the position which Great Britain has assumed becomes the recognized law, then that Power will certainly suffer quite as much hereafter from this new interpretation of the duties of nations toward each other, as this country can do.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.—It is a noticeable fact that in all parts of the North and the East the construction of a Pacific Railroad has become the subject which, more than any other that pertains to the future growth and development of the whole country, is talked of on every side. It is constantly becoming a matter of deeper interest to the people. The construction of the road is an enterprise which engages the attention of the nation. The people of the East see in it a means of obtaining access to the rich mineral regions of the Pacific coast and of turning the valuable commerce of eastern Asia and the islands of the Pacific ocean across the American continent to the cities of the Atlantic seaboard, while the people of these shores look to the railroad as the great agency which is to assist in the enrichment and development of this part of our country. As might be expected, however, the efforts of the people at the further end of the route are divided between rival lines. Each considerable city must of course, look after its own interests and take into consideration how they will be affected by the building of the road on the proposed routes. Chicago and St Louis are the chief rivals in this regard. But this competition will hardly have the effect to delay the work. On the contrary it will be likely to stimulate the cities that are contending for supremacy, to greater efforts, in order to secure the prize which the railroad when completed will bring them. The line through Kansas is advancing with satisfactory rapidity. A company is engaged in completing the railroad across the State of Iowa; the design being to extend it through Nebraska to the gold fields of Montana. The time will come ere long when trade can take a direct route across the continent instead of being forced out of its course through long voyages over the seas.

At the beginning of the rebellion the Copperheads regarded secession as an accomplished fact claiming that the States which had assumed to withdraw were actually out of the Union and that they could not constitutionally be forced in again. Now, those same Copperheads assert that those States never were out of the Union, and as a consequence that they are entitled to immediate representation in Congress. "Democracy never changes."

The remains of General Simon Kenton were recently removed from the spot where he was buried on Mad river near Bellefontaine, Ohio, and re-interred at Urbana in that State. The removal of the ashes of the noble pioneer was attended with appropriate ceremonies.

The Army as it Is

The present military organization embraces nineteen departments comprehended in five military divisions as follows:

1 The Department of the East: Major General Joseph Hooker to command to embrace the New England States, New York and New Jersey. Headquarters at New York city.

2 The Middle Department: Major General W S Hancock to command, to embrace the State of West Virginia, Maryland (excepting the counties of Montgomery, that part of Anne Arundel lying south of the Annapolis and Elk Ridge railroad and excluding the city of Annapolis, Prince George's, Calvert, Charles and St Mary's) the county of Loudoun and the Shenandoah valley as far south as and including Rockingham county in Virginia, the States of Delaware and Pennsylvania. Headquarters at Baltimore.

3 The Department of Washington: Major General C C Augur to command to embrace the District of Columbia, the counties of Montgomery, that part of Anne Arundel lying south of the Annapolis and Elk Ridge railroad and including the city of Annapolis, Prince George's, Calvert, Charles, and St Mary's, in Maryland, and Alexandria and Fairfax counties, in Virginia. Headquarters at Washington.

4 The Department of Ohio, Major General E O C Ord to command to embrace the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan. Headquarters at Detroit.

5 The Department of the Tennessee, Major General George Stoneman to command to embrace the State of Tennessee. Headquarters at Knoxville.

6 The Department of Kentucky: Major General John M Palmer to command to embrace the State of Kentucky, and Jeffersonville and New Albany, in Indiana. Headquarters at Louisville.

7 The Department of the Missouri, Major General John Pope to command to embrace the States of Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas, and the Territories of Colorado, Utah, Nebraska, Dacotah, New Mexico and Montana. Headquarters at St. Louis.

8 The Department of Virginia, Major General Alfred H Terry to command to embrace the State of Virginia, excepting Alexandria, Fairfax and Loudon counties and the Shenandoah valley as far south as and including Rockingham county. Headquarters at Richmond.

9 The Department of North Carolina: Major General J M Schofield to command to embrace the State of North Carolina. Headquarters at Raleigh.

10 The Department of South Carolina, Major General Daniel Sickles to command, to embrace the State of South Carolina, Headquarters at Charleston.

11 The department of Georgia, Major General James B Steedman to command, to embrace the State of Georgia. Headquarters at Augusta.

12 The department of Florida, Major General John G Foster to command, to embrace the State of Florida. Headquarters at Tallahassee.

13 The department of the Mississippi, Major General Thomas J Wood to command to embrace the State of Mississippi. Headquarters at Vicksburg.

14 The department of Alabama, Major General C C Wood to command, to embrace the State of Alabama. Headquarters at Mobile.

15 The department of Louisiana Major General E R S Canby to command, to embrace the State of Louisiana. Headquarters at New Orleans.

16 The department of Texas, Major General H G Wright to command, to embrace the State of Texas. Headquarters at Galveston.

17 The department of Arkansas, Major General J J Reynolds to command, to embrace the State of Arkansas and Indian Territory. Headquarters at Little Rock.

18 The department of the Columbia, Brigadier General F Steele to command, to embrace the State of Oregon and Territories of Washington and Idaho. Headquarters at Fort Vancouver.

19 The department of California, Major General Irvin McDowell to command to embrace the States of California and Nevada and Territories of New Mexico and Arizona. Headquarters at San Francisco.

1 The military division of the Atlantic, Major General George G Meade to command, to embrace the department of the East, Middle department, department of Virginia, department of North Carolina and department of South Carolina. Headquarters at Philadelphia.

2 The military division of the Mississippi, Major General W T Sherman to command, to embrace the department of the Ohio, department of the Missouri and department of Arkansas. Headquarters at St Louis.

3 The military division of the Gulf, Major General P H Sheridan to command, to embrace the department of Louisiana, department of Texas and department of Florida. Headquarters at New Orleans.

4 The military division of the Tennessee, Major General G H Thomas to command, to embrace the department of the Tennessee, department of Kentucky, department of Georgia, department of Mississippi and department of Alabama. Headquarters at Nashville.

5. The military division of the Pacific, Major General H W Halleck to command, to embrace the department of the Columbia and department of California. Headquarters at San Francisco.

The mass of the forces discharged were mustered out by September 14, or within two and a half months from the time the movement of the troops homeward commenced. The average per month was 296,442.

COTTON GROWING IN THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.—The Honolulu Commercial Advertiser, in an article on the experiments in cotton growing in the Sandwich Islands, says:

Mr. Nebeker of the Mormon settlement at Laie on this Island, who has been engaged in raising cotton, informs us that his land has produced about 1,200 pounds of Sea Island seed cotton per acre this year, and as it is still bearing, the yield will be larger. One advantage of cotton culture at these islands is that, being a perennial, when it once begins bearing it will continue to bear without stopping for years, unless the plant is cut down and allowed to grow up again, which should be done in the winter.

An enterprising native on this Island, who has ten acres of Sea Island cotton growing, gathered from his farm up to October about 5,000 pounds seed cotton, and thinks he will obtain 5,000 more before the close of this year, making 10,000 pounds, which is the largest quantity we have heard of any native producing during the present year. His crop will be worth to him at least $760, and this without any instruction but such as his own limited knowledge and observation suggested.

GOOD ITEM.—The New York Tribune of December 7th gives the following very accurate information. It used to be said that old Sam Johnson, with all the knowledge he affected of the English people really knew nothing of any matter outside of London. So the daily papers of the East are often at fault when they speak of things beyond their own cities. Here is the Tribune's item:

There is great excitement in Victoria, Oregon, over the reported discovery of rich placers at Big Bend. The largest nugget yet found was worth $1,000. One man took out $400 in one day. To make $300 a day was a common thing.

The report of the Controller of the Currency shows that on the first of October last the amount of bank notes in circulation was $171,321,903, of State bank notes as appears by the returns to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, $78,867,575 of legal tender notes and fractional currency, $701,584,638, of national currency yet to be issued, $1,0_6,178,197, making a total of $1,083,412,283. This is the sum total of authorized currency. It is estimated however that the amount in actual circulation, i. e. the paper which is in constant use as a medium of exchange, will not greatly exceed $460,000,000.

Certain representatives of the Southern chivalry who couldn't endure the humiliation of living in this abolition country where every negro is as free as the high minded pompous gentleman who used to own him have gone to Brazil where much to their chagrin, they discover that free negroes are on full equality with white men. Even the Brazilian Cabinet is as often composed of negroes as of whites. With these things, the fugitive chivalry of rosarl are highly disgusted and propose to return to the United States at an early day.

HIS EARLY TRAITS.—General Grant's father now the recipient of marked and respectful attention at Washington, said recently, when asked of his son's early characteristics: "Never saw him show his grit when a boy but once and that was in trying to break a vicious colt. It was a tough fight but the colt had to surrender."

The Farmers' Bank of Kentucky having lost $80,000 by the Morgan raid in June, 1864, sued E W Witherspoon, a returned Morgan officer, at [illegible] ted his land and got judgment from a Circuit Court for the whole sum.

SUFFRAGE A NATURAL RIGHT.—We find the following in an Eastern journal:

There are many ways of human government in the world but there is only one right way and that is the way of a democratic republic or representative democracy, in which every person not convicted of crime, of mature age and sound mind, without respect to color or previous condition enjoys the right of voting for and selecting the makers and executors of the laws of the community in which the voter may reside.

In other words, the right way of all human government is the consent of all the governed who have arrived at the years of discretion and who are not restrained of their liberty for violation of law. And the only way of getting that consent directly is through the ballot box. Hence the right of suffrage is a natural right. It is born with every human being, and its exercise is essential to the protection of every other political or civil right.

They who argue that suffrage is a mere political right which one part of a community can grant to or withhold from another part thereof, and is only useful as a means of protecting the natural right to life liberty and the pursuit of happiness, yield the whole ground claimed by the monarchist, and the aristocrat or oligarch.

For, if the white man can exclude the black man from the right of suffrage because it is not deemed essential to the protection of the excluded man's right to life liberty and the pursuit of happiness in the judgment of the white man then the argument of the aristocrat of England in limiting the right of voting to the possessors of property, and the argument of the autocrat of the Russias in denying to his subjects all right of suffrage, are equally sound.

BRITISH HEROES.—England has recently lost her two representative men—Lord Palmerston and Tom Sayers are dead and in their deaths as in their lives they illustrated the prevailing traits of English character. The nobleman united with a certain manliness and truthfulness of character displayed an arrogance and self conceit that was eminently English. He was the bully of high life as Sayers was of low life. He was the embodiment of those mental traits of English character which found their physical counterpart in the pugilist—both illustrating that faith in brute force which so strongly marks the English mind. The noble lord admired the pugilist and the pugilist adored the noble lord. Palmerston was followed to his grave by the nobility of the land and the representatives of royalty, and Sayers did not lack as appropriate a following. The scene at the latter's grave is said to have been most extraordinary. A vast crowd of roughs and thieves the scum of the back courts and alleys of London—creatures who only come to light in the aggregate at an execution or a race course rushed in to hold saturnalia at the grave of the pugilist. The police were overcome by the crowd of thieves and blackguards, and the tombs and covered crypts were crowded with people who turbulently jested and laughed, trampled on the grass and defiled the graves with as little reverence for the place as if it had been an old prize ring. These creatures recognized Sayers as a national hero and paid him appropriate honors.

Gov Orr of South Carolina, in his inaugural address expresses a hope that Congress will see fit, at some future day, to make provision for the compensation of those whose slaves were emancipated by the war. The Legislature of Virginia has ordered a statement to be prepared, giving the number of slaves lost or emancipated in each county of the State, with a view of presenting a claim to Congress for payment therefor. It is hardly to be doubted that there will be an effort throughout the South to obtain remuneration for the "slave property" that the rebels lost by means of their own wrong.

LIVES LOST IN THE REBELLION.—The War Department computes the number of deaths in the Union armies since the commencement of the war at 325,000, and of Southern soldiers at 200,000, making at least 525,000 lives that have been lost a part of the costly price paid for the defense of the nation's life. At Gettysburg 23,000 Union soldiers were killed, wounded or taken prisoners—our greatest loss during one campaign. General Grant's losses, from the time he crossed the Rapidan until Lee's surrender, were about 90,000. Great as were our losses, they were far below those incurred in European wars, owing to our superior medical and sanitary arrangements, and the care of the Government for its troops.

BRIGHAM YOUNG IN THE LIQUOR BUSINESS.—In one Brigham's sermons, he said: "The man that sells liquor, and thinks to escape damnation fools himself." He has, however, changed his sentiments on this subject and has determined to save the whole class of liquor venders from the hard fate, by taking the damnation upon himself alone. He has forbidden all to sell, and has opened a bar himself the only bar in Salt Lake City. He claims and exercises the sole right to sell liquor by wholesale or retail.

AN ENGLISH AMBASSADOR.—Cameron the English ambassador, is still detained as a captive by the Emperor of Abyssinia. His majesty declines to release him upon the ground that Great Britain by her influence in Egypt, might have averted the troubles that have arisen between the Viceroy and Theodorus and threatens now to keep Cameron in durance until Lord Russell has succeeded in preventing Egypt from annoying Abyssinia.

METEOROLOGICAL PHENOMENON.—A meteor, says the Virginia, Montana Post, which the profane and vulgar would pronounce as something larger than a stable bucket, and intensely luminous, was observed at about nine o'clock on Monday evening, December 11th, shooting across the firmament from east to west. It was seen most clearly in Hot Springs District. The meteor burst like a star rocket, sending showers of sparks in all directions.

OPPOSITION.—We heard it stated a few days since, in San Francisco, says the Folsom Telegraph that a company has been organized in New York city, with a capital of five millions, to run a line of steamers on the Sacramento river and also on the coast routes in opposition to the California Steam Navigation Company's boats.

TURNED EDITOR.—General Buckner, late rebel officer, has taken charge of the editorial department of one of the New Orleans dailies—the Crescent.

We are in receipt [illegible] further particulars. The government [illegible] the official version of the affair. The [illegible] the official account [illegible] the matter, and states that the American flag was [illegible] at Hilo to deceive the Thames [illegible] into that port, and [illegible]. By what right was the [illegible] flag used [illegible]. The account says if the Nettie had been allowed to [illegible] the Thames would [illegible] the force under his command. [illegible] the American flag flying at the masthead [illegible]. We are not very skilled in international law, but [illegible] liberty had been taken with the American flag [illegible] the occasion referred to. We condemn the [illegible] in hoisting the American flag as a decoy [illegible] not an American vessel. In the [illegible] Not less ridiculous than the expedition after the [illegible] was the arraigning of the girl before the police judge, and the termination of the suit. Everybody knew who and what she was; but that she should be arraigned for acts which she had been encouraged [illegible], was very singular. And when the truth began to come out before his honor in court [illegible] began to be made public [illegible] was dropped instanter, the Attorney General entering a nolle prosequi and the judge sending the girl home. Thus terminated the farce. Capt Hanham pays the expense of his part of the sport out of his own pocket, and [illegible] the other to be paid by private purses [illegible] have a right to complain. But against the State being called on to pay two thousand dollars, more or less, the tax payers protest.

CLEANING OFF SIDE-WALKS.—We are pleased to [illegible] the [illegible] evinced by a portion of the occupants [illegible] in this city to clean the snow off the sidewalks in front of their places of business. This is right. There can be no better time to effectually accomplish the work than now, and all know that it is extremely difficult to pass along places where it has not been done. Those who refuse or neglect to perform this work should be subject to the usages of some of the north western cities on the other side of the continent. There people are obliged to keep their sidewalks in good condition, and remove the snow as fast as it falls. On one occasion a stranger to such usages leased a residence on the corner of a block in the business part of a thriving western city, and failed to remove the snow that piled up on his portion of the walk until it was nearly as high as the fence for two or three hundred feet. When the condition of matters became known he received a notice from the authorities one morning that he [illegible] remove the snow that day or suffer the penalties, which were severe. He sought counsel and was advised to remove the snow, shortly after which, his employees were numerous, and their operations resembled the description of the building of the Pacific Railroad, given by [illegible] in his lectures. Ever since then that man has an eye to corner lots, but, being now a resident of [illegible], he still remembers the lesson, keeps his premises in order, and is desirous that others should do so. It is no very great task, and if uniformly applied, results in much good to community. Front street was permanently [illegible] at great expense last season, and ought to be kept in order. Those who take the pains to clear the walk in front of their places of business, are certainly entitled to credit for it, but if their neighbors do not do so, of what use is it to the people?

INUNDATION.—The rain continued most of the day [illegible], and the river was still spreading in the volume [illegible] over wharves and banks. The wood dealers [illegible] with increased activity to save their property [illegible] generally was dull. The boats returning [illegible] unable to make the riffle, the Fannie Troup [illegible] and the Senator and Alert to Canemah. The flood has caused a rise at Oregon City, such [illegible] both the county road and railroad. A [illegible] from there informs us that the people of the [illegible] were becoming fearful of its safety and a bulk[head] of sand bags and plank had been constructed to [keep] the water from entering the town. The People's [Transpor]tation Company were not able to reach their [ware]-house with the Senator yesterday, and as the [basin] is submerged, so communication with freight to [and from] the falls by either company is temporarily [illegible]. The cause of the Fannie Troup being unable [illegible] was owing to the backing up of the [Willamette] river, and the quantity of ice in the stream. [illegible] will leave to-day for Oregon City. The Alert [illegible] for Wednesday, but should it continue [illegible] will leave sooner, in order to take the flour from [illegible] Savier & Co.

[illegible] OF THE "HUB."—New York papers are [illegible] allusions to Boston as a "provincial" [illegible] etc., and lose no opportunity of belittling it by [compar]ison with the glory and grandeur of the metropolis. The Post has a capital article in retort, which [cont]ains an amusing mixture of fact and fiction. The [Post] says: "The city of New York is tributary to Tri[mount]ain, and is in a great measure dependent on Boston [for] her position and prosperity. One cannot walk her [business] streets, where her largest firms are located, [without] noticing that many of our Boston firms have sent [their] clerks or junior partners to that city and established [illegible] in connection with their wholesale establishments. New York may be properly called the retail [branch] of Boston's business. We applaud these [efforts] (to aggrandise their own cities) of the local press, [but] only have to say that Boston, as the hub of the universe, is too [sure] of her proud position to feel any [emotions] but those of pleasure at these strivings on the [part] of other cities to rival her."

[THE] FALL OF SNOW.—According to the weather record [of] C. N. Larrabee, furnished to this paper, it will [be seen] that during last week two feet and eight inches [of snow] fell in this city. From all we are able to learn [there] was but a slight fall throughout the valley. [illegible] at the farm of Edward Long, three [miles] east of the city, on Saturday, with a flock of sheep, [which] had given out in consequence of the snow they had [illegible] on nearing this part of the country. Mr [illegible] the drover reports that there was very little [illegible] miles south, but that a large quantity of rain [fell] which had caused the streams to be very [high]. West of the city no great depth of snow [fell]. On the ranges of the mountains it was quite [deep].

[THE] [illegible] CENTRAL COMMITTEE.—The State Central [Committ]ee of that [illegible] organization known as the "[Demo]cratic" party, met yesterday in this city. [illegible] five or six counties appeared to be represented. We [learn] that the 5th of April is fixed as the day for [the] State Convention. It will be held in this place. [County] Conventions are recommended to be held on [illegible] of March. The meeting of the committee [illegible] the first appearance of the copperheads for the [illegible] Hereafter, however, they will appear on [illegible] until the close of the first Monday in June, [when] they will be withdrawn. 'Positively their last appearance' will be made on that day.

[A] NEW COPPERHEAD PAPER.—Rumors are rife in the [illegible] a couple of Copperheads are purposing to start [a paper], to be devoted to the work of restoring State [rights], together with slavery and the political principles [upon] which the late Southern Confederacy was built. It is [said] that it will also strenuously oppose this "Infernal [abolit]ion war." The names of the persons who are to [engage] in this stupendous work of bringing the country [back] to "Democratic" principles—that is to say, to the [principles] which were overthrown when the rebellion was [crushed]—are Abbott and Butler. The former, we hear, [is] from Illinois; we have learned nothing about the [latter]. We do not know when their paper will be issued, [but] the faithful inform us that it will come out in a [illegible].

[A] [FIT]TING COMPLIMENT.—T. McF. Patton, Esq., having [resign]ed his position as Secretary of the People's [Transporta]tion Company, the board of directors passed [a vote] of thanks complimentary to him for the faithful [illegible] and effective manner in which he had discharged the duties of that office during his three years' of service. [Mr.] McF is certainly deserving of such favor, and the [mani]festation was right worthily bestowed. Having [mer]ited such approbation in this instance may we not [sa]y that in whatever business pursuit he may in future [engage], he may acquit himself no less honorably and receive as flattering testimonial from those with whom he may become associated. Patton has hosts of friends, all of whom wish to see him prosperous, that in accordance with his usual disposition he may be happy.

ARRESTED.—Henry Grelsmore, on complaint of Felix [illegible], was arrested yesterday for violent and disorderly [conduct] at the California Restaurant. There was no [furn]iture broken on his account, but sundry glass tumblers went in on the occasion. The relative merits and [demer]its of the transaction will be tried before Justice [Hoffm]an to-day.

[ERR]OR.—In the last report of the Common Council [illegible], two errors were made in the payment of [illegible]. The claim of G. Hodgkins, for cleaning cistern [illegible] was $2 50 instead of $5 50 as reported. That of [illegible] Johnson, $13 instead of $18 50, for services at the [Engine] House of No. 2.

[LE]CTURE.—Right Rev. Bishop Scott, will deliver the [illegible] lecture in the course of lectures for the benefit of [the] Portland Academy and Female Seminary this evening, [at] [illegible] o'clock, at the M. E. Church, on the following subject: "The Love of Truth."

[illegible] FINED IN THE STREET.—On examination [before] Justice Hoffman yesterday Rachel [illegible] was [fined] [illegible] and costs for depositing filth in the streets. [illegible] "costive" matter with her.

[ESC]APED.—Cornelius Gillespie, committed to the [count]y Jail on a charge of theft a few days ago, has been [illegible] from durance vile. It was a [illegible] that [illegible] off, and he may say he escaped by the skin of his [teeth].

[INS]ANE. On Saturday last Geo. Thrasher was brought [to the] Insane Asylum by the Sheriff and Clerk of Jose[phine] county.

THE FORREST DIVORCE CASE.—The interminable divorce case of Edwin Forrest the actor has [taken] a novel shape. He appeals to the Supreme [Court] of the United States to set aside the action [of] the New York Supreme Court, which granted his wife a divorce, his grounds being that the [marr]iage occurred in Great Britain and the [Co]urts of this country have no business to meddle [with] it.

It was a starving corset maker who thus vented [his] [illegible] complaint: "Shame that I should [be] without bread—I have stayed the stomachs of [illegible]."

[The] United States smokers consume a billion of [cigar]s annually.

A QUEER OIL THEORY.—The most ingenious oil theory is that broached by Wm H Hubble, a Philadelphia engineer who conjectures that petroleum is a vegetable oil which is produced in the Pacific Ocean by the decomposition of sea plants and mixed with salt water. It pervades the open Polar Sea discovered by Dr Kane, and prevents it from freezing; that being lighter than water the centrifugal force of the earth in its rotation causes the water or the denser fluid, to accumulate about the North Pole; that being light and oily it is highly susceptible to capillary attraction; that this sandstone stratum crops out in the Atlantic Ocean and absorbs this oil inducing it by capillary attraction to flow in its channel or stratum under this continent in a southerly and southwesterly direction; that it crops out again in the Pacific Ocean and the oil there recedes and mingles with the waters of the Pacific, giving the ocean its mild and placid character, and forms the well known and oleaginous food for whales which is visible and exists in the water of the ocean, and extends thousands of miles northward and on which the whales live and derive their oil and is called their feeding ground. In the Pacific Ocean it flows again northward through Behring's Straits by the same law which made it accumulate in the open Polar Sea; that is being lighter than water, and not capable of uniting with it, the water, which is heaviest, will accumulate about the equator, while this oily lighter matter will flow to the North Pole, and there form the open, unfrozen sea. Thus it performs its great office in the laboratory of nature, flowing in a circle through this particular strata of sandstone, under this continent from the Arctic to the Pacific Ocean by a capillary attraction, and there is plainly visible in the water in a coagulated form as the food of whales prepared in and by the very salt and dense water of that temperature and flowing in the process of separation for thousands of miles northward, forming necessarily the open or unfrozen sea, and being the great basin of carbon or oil of the earth for the use of man.

There is one office which the oil probably performs that seems to be overlooked by Hubble—that is greasing the gudgeons of the North Pole.

ROAD FROM MONTANA TO THE MISSOURI.—The project of a road from Montana to the Upper Missouri river begins to assume shape. An expedition set out to prospect the road has returned. The Montana Post says:

Captain Ray W Andrews—the leader—reports the road from Mussel Shell to Helena as being under 200 miles in length, and probably not more than 140. The wood, water and grass along the line is splendid, the levels are low, and only one easy crossing of the Belt range of mountains to be encountered. The river running along the road for many miles is called Pemberton creek. The company will spend from $10 000 to $12 000 on the line in order to have it opened for travel by next spring. A site is laid off for a town to be called "Kercheval City," ranches pre-empted and deeded to the company, and every preparation has been made to insure a successful start in the much needed enterprise of establishing a town at the permanent head of navigation on the Missouri.

SPAIN SNUBBED.—The Tribune says the conduct of Spain, with reference to Chile and Peru, meets with strong and unanimous disapprobation throughout Europe. The mercantile classes urgently call upon their governments to prevent Spain from injuring the interest of other nations by an attempt to enforce demands altogether baseless. In London, Messrs Rothschild, Baring and the other leading bankers have sent an address in this sense to Lord Clarendon, the new Minister of Foreign Affairs. The English Ministry fully sympathize with these remonstrances, and in a Cabinet meeting, held November 18th, it was determined to address an energetic note to the Spanish Government against the conduct of Admiral Pareja. The Spanish Government is preparing a circular to the European powers in which it will undertake to vindicate its claims. The French semi official organs thus far content themselves with expressing the hope that the dispute will be amicably settled.

CALIFORNIA RAISINS.—We have been shown, says the Sonora Herald, some California cured raisins, from the vineyard of Mr A. Wildes, of Shaw's Flat, some varieties of which are superior to any imported raisins that we have ever seen in the State. We were particularly pleased with those made from the White Muscat, of Alexandria. They look and taste like the very best specimens of Malaga grapes. There was, also, a specimen of raisins made from the large pink Rhine grapes, that grow in such enormous clusters in our vineyards, not so good, perhaps, as the White Muscats, but a very superior article nevertheless—much better, in fact, than a large proportion of foreign raisins.

IMMENSE STAGE ENTERPRISE.—The Kansas City Journal of Commerce announces that there is in contemplation in that city the starting of a stage line and express company to carry freight and passengers and the mails from that point to New Mexico, Arizona, Salt Lake, Colorado and other places. It further adds that the enterprise is in opposition to the Butterfield Stage and Express Company, and upon a larger scale, having a capital of over $2,000,000, it proposes to absorb the stage line at present starting from that city, use its roads, (the Santa Fé) and succeed it in its franchises.

The Queen of England is now sovereign over, it is said, one continent, 100 peninsulas, 500 promontories, 1,000 lakes, 2,000 rivers, and 10,000 islands. Her subjects number more than 150,000,000. By a wave of her hand, she can summon an army of 500,000 soldiers, and a navy of 1,000 ships of war.

General Carlton, commanding the District of New Mexico has been ordered by the War Department to organize a powerful force against the Apache Indians, who infest the rich mining districts of Arizona and New Mexico, and who have never been brought into subjection.

Sheridan had a very convenient formula for acknowledging all the new publications sent him, "Dear Sir—I have received your exquisite work, and have no doubt I shall be highly delighted—after I have read it."

COUGHS, HOARSENESS, AND THE VARIOUS THROAT AFFECTIONS to which Public Speakers, Military Officers, and singers are liable, relieved by "Brown's Bronchial Troches." Having a direct influence to the affected parts, they allay Pulmonary Irritation. The freedom from all deleterious ingredients, makes the Troches a safe remedy for the most delicate female, or youngest child, and has caused them to be held in the highest esteem by those who use them.

DANGER OF DECEPTION; DON'T BE DECEIVED.—That apparently trifling and persistently hacking cough portends something serious; Consumption stares you in the face. Be wise, then, and check it at once by a free use of New ell's Pulmonary Syrup.

WILCOX & GIBBS SEWING MACHINE.

We would call attention to the following facts in connection with this Machine, which renders it superior to any other in use:

It forms a flat elastic seam, which will not rip in wear.

It is entirely noiseless;

A patented device prevents its being turned backward;

The needle cannot be set wrong;

Can be used successfully without other instructions than accompany the Machine;

It received the Gold Medal of the American Institute in 1863. For particulars enquire of FRANKLIN SAID NEAR A CENTURY AGO: "MY object is to call attention to the fact, that a Policy of Life Insurance is the Best and Safest Provision that a man can make for his family." All experience proves THAT THIS IS A FACT.

THE HOME is conducted on the mutual plan, in the best sense of the word. It divides the profits ANNUALLY, and applies the same immediately to pay the amount due on the annual premiums.

THE HOME has an ample Cash Capital, securely invested under the laws of the State of New York for the protection of Policy-Holders, and has a Board of Directors of unimpeachable character, all of whom are Stock Holders in the Company.

It offers a permanent loan to the assured of one half of the annual premium, which loan is paid by the annual dividends, or deducted from the amount due under the Policy.

THE STANDARD
AMERICAN BILLIARD TABLES!
AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS.

MESSRS. PHELAN & COLLENDER

WOULD RESPECTFULLY CALL THE ATTENTION of persons wanting Billiard Tables to the great superiority of the above tables, manufactured exclusively at their establishment.

At the Billiard Congress of 1863, composed of all the first class players of America, it was unanimously resolved that tables of our manufacture should be used at all matches for the Championship, as the best and only reliable tables.

These Billiard Tables have received the unqualified approval of the best players and most competent judges, who have universally pronounced them unequaled for general excellence and durability.

Seven distinct patents for improvements in Billiard Tables have been granted to us by the United States Patent Office, and we have lately obtained a Patent from the French Government, for our improvement in Billiard Cushions.

We employ in the construction of our tables, a variety of machines specially made for the purpose, by means of which we are enabled to insure a scientific and mechanical accuracy hitherto unknown in Billiard manufacture.

Having a long experience and thorough knowledge of all the appliances of Billiards and constantly on hand a large stock of the best and most thoroughly seasoned materials, we are prepared to furnish everything required in the Billiard line with unprecedented dispatch.

The eminent French Billiard Player, M. Berger, has published the following opinion:

"New York, 3d August, 1861.

"On the eve of leaving the United States, I am happy to declare to all amateurs of Billiards that, after a tour of eleven months through the principal cities, I have been enabled to judge in a satisfactory manner of the superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by Phelan & Collender. The system of manufacturing is so superior, that I am happy to introduce their style of cushion into France. They have united to their manufacture of American Billiard Tables that of the French Tables, of remarkable excellence and beauty. For these reasons, I am happy to make this declaration.
"BERGER, CLAUDIUS,
Prof. of Billiards, Paris."

Parties ordering from us will find our prices as low as good work can possibly be made for. We sell first-class articles at a fair price, and will not make an inferior article at any price.

Orders by mail carefully and promptly executed. Illustrated Catalogues and Price Lists sent by mail. The "BILLIARD CUE," a journal published in the interest of Billiards, and containing details of all novelties, a copious record of Billiard news, and everything of interest to amateurs of Billiards, sent free on application.
M. E. HUGHES,
730 Montgomery St., San Francisco, Cal., is our only authorized Agent on the Pacific coast, to whom all orders should be addressed.

ALLEN'S
LUNG BALSAM!
The Remedy for Curing
CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS,
Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD; heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect, that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS' TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION! IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.

"CONSTITUTION WATER,"
THE ONLY REMEDY FOR DISEASES OF THE

BLADDER, KIDNEYS,
Gravel, Dropsical Swellings,
GENITAL DEBILITY, ETC.

THE ASTONISHING SUCCESS WHICH HAS AT tended this invaluable medicine renders it the most valuable one ever discovered. No language can convey an adequate idea of the immediate and almost miraculous change which it occasions in the debilitated and shattered system. In fact, it stands unrivalled as a remedy for the permanent cure of the maladies above mentioned, and also—

DIABETES, IMPOTENCY,
LOSS OF MUSCULAR ENERGY,
PHYSICAL PROSTRATION,
INDIGESTION,
SEMINAL WEAKNESS,
GLEET, FLUOR ALBUS,

And in every disease any way connected with the disorder or decay of the PROCREATIVE FUNCTIONS. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness, should take the

CONSTITUTION WATER,

Whether broken down by excess, weak by nature, or impaired by sickness, the unstrung and relaxed organization is at once rebraced, revivified and built up. Well may this celebrated medicine be called the

MEDICAL WONDER.

The stooping, trembling victim of depression and debility becomes a new man; he stands erect, he moves with a firm step; his mind, which was previously sunk in gloom or an almost idiotic apathy, becomes bright and active, and he goes forth regenerated, conscious of new vigor.—The medicine reaches the CONSTITUTION itself, and restores it to its normal condition.

IRRITATION OF THE NECK OF THE BLADDER,
INFLAMMATION OF THE KIDNEYS, AND
CATARRH OF THE BLADDER,
STRANGUARY AND BURNING, OR PAINFUL URINATING,
CALCULUS, GRAVEL,
BRICK DUST DEPOSIT, AND MUCOUS
OR MILKY DISCHARGES AFTER URINATING.

For these diseases it is truly a sovereign remedy, and too much cannot be said in its praise. A single dose has been known to relieve the most urgent symptoms. TRY IT in these cases, and you will ever give praise to

CONSTITUTION WATER.

Constitution Life Syrup purges the system entirely of all the evil effects of Mercury, removing the Bad Breath, and curing the Weak Joints and Rheumatic Pains which the use of Calomel is sure to produce. It hardens Spongy Gums and secures the teeth as firmly as ever.

Constitution Life Syrup

Eradicates, root and branch, all Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, like

Ulcers, Pimples, Blotches,

And all other difficulties of this kind, which so much disfigure the outward appearance of both males and females, and often making them a disgusting object to themselves and their friends.

Constitution Life Syrup

CURES ALL SWELLING OF THE GLANDS, either of the Face, Neck, or Female Breast.

As a general Blood-Purifying Agent, the Life Syrup stands unrivalled by any preparation in the world.

Constitution Life Syrup

Is the Poor Man's friend and the Rich Man's blessing. Buy it, take it, and be cured. It is universal in its effects.
